REPLY IN SUPPORT OF DR. ABDULHADI'S MOTION TO DISMISS PLAINTIFF'S SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT

1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2 1. INTRODUCTION

3 In its prior order granting Dr. Abdulhadi's motion to dismiss the first amended complaint 4 the Court noted that it was granting plaintiffs leave to amend their complaint against her "out of 5 an abundance of caution". That caution, however justified, has not been rewarded with a 6 pleading "alleging facts showing that Abdulhadi herself acted to cause plaintiffs' alleged 7 constitutional injuries". Instead we confront a pleading which argues "facts" nowhere alleged in 8 the Second Amended Complaint, ("SAC") cites caselaw for authority it does not support, and 9 attempts to relitigate matters the Court has already reviewed and ruled upon.

10 Through careful fact-checking plaintiffs' opposition this brief shall identify each of these 11 misstatements or refusal to accept this Court's prior rulings. This Reply shall place Plaintiffs' 12 claims in their proper legal context, and will demonstrate why this failed and seemingly 13 disingenuous third strike should be their last.

14 2. PLAINTIFFS MISSTATE OR IGNORE THE LAW OF THE CASE,

15 MISCOMPREHEND CASE LAW THEY RELY ON, AND ARGUE

16 "FACTS" THEY NEVER ALLEGED IN THEIR SAC.

17 A. Plaintiffs Cannot Relitigate the Court's Holdings About Invidious
 18 Discrimination and Ought Not Ignore the Court's Prior Observations.

19 This Court has repeatedly stressed that plaintiffs' alleged First Amendment claims are 20 invidious discrimination claims, whether the target of these allegations is the CSU, the 21 administrators, or Dr. Abdulhadi. Dkt. 124 at 25, at 20; 36, 8, etc. Plaintiffs appear to argue as 22 though this decision never existed, claiming that their claims "do not rest on intentional invidious 23 discrimination." Dkt. 147 at 3, 16. Unable to avoid the black letter "law of the case" doctrine 24 Folex Golf Indus. v. O-TA Precision Indus. Co., 700 Fed. Appx. 738, 739, (9th Cir. 2017), 25 plaintiffs do not even admit that there is a prior ruling and extensive discussion on this point.

26 Plaintiffs likewise ignore the Court's observation that the presence of a Jewish-identified 27 group participating in the KYR Fair creates a potentially insurmountable burden to an invidious 28 discrimination claim. It is telling that confronted with the Court's observation in its dismissal

SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT

1 order, plaintiffs avoided alleging any facts in their SAC about the presence of Jewish Voice for 2 Peace (“JVP”) only to advance fact-based arguments in their opposition. Dkt. 147 at 17, 1-7.
 3 Plaintiffs retreat to this brief to question whether JVP is a Jewish group but Plaintiffs never 4 having the courage to (falsely) allege this in their SAC. Plaintiffs also complain that JVP is not 5 an “on-campus” organization, and doubt whether its representatives were as capable as Hillel’s 6 of providing informational training. Of course, these latter two complaints have nothing to do 7 with the question of invidious discrimination, an issue plaintiffs seek to gloss over.

8 B. Plaintiffs Cannot Make Up Facts About Supervision That Are Not in the 9 SAC and Argue These “Alternative Facts” in Their Opposition.

10 Plaintiffs have curiously used allegations appear nowhere in their SAC to argue for their 11 SAC’s survival. Specifically, Plaintiffs are acutely aware that a college advisor is not a 12 supervisor and that influence is not control. Plaintiffs advance the bald conclusion that Dr.
 13 Abdulhadi controlled the students and is therefore responsible for their actions. To conceal the 14 dearth of factual allegations supporting this conclusion, plaintiffs’ opposition invokes 15 “alternative facts” which are nowhere to be found in their actual allegations.

What Plaintiffs’ Opposition Claims to Have Alleged	What the SAC Actually Alleges
Dr. Abdulhadi is a supervisor. Dkt. 147 at 1, 12; 3, 20; 6, 8; and 12:12.	Plaintiffs do not even scruple to refer to the SAC for the claims they make at Dkt. 147 at 1, 12; 3, 20; and 12, 12. The claim is repeated Dkt. 147 at 6, 8 citing to Dkt. 125 at ¶ 70, describing Dr. Abdulhadi as a faculty advisor and mentor, and never alleges supervision . (In fact, the only supervisor

1		identified in the SAC is Mary Ann Begley, 2 Dkt. 125 at ¶84. ¹
3	One of the KYR Fair organizers who Dr. 4 Abdulhadi allegedly “directed” to exclude 5 Hillel “was a paid employee of SFSU.” Dkt. 6 147 at 12, 1-2.	The opposition cites Dkt. 125 at ¶119 for this “fact”. Not one word of this paragraph describes the Fair organizer as an employee.
7	“Dr. Abdulhadi leads and mentors (GUPS) ...” 8 Dkt. 147 at 5, 10.	The opposition cited Dkt. 125 at ¶40, which says nothing about Dr. Abdulhadi. Neither this paragraph, nor any other explains how being a faculty advisor transforms into “leading” the group.
12	“Dr. Abdulhadi ... flexed her influence with 13 COES to conscript them to stage a hunger 14 strike which successfully extracted a 15 commitment from President Wong not to 16 investigate GUPS students or faculty for 17 disruption of the Barkat event. Dkt. 147 at 6, 18 9-11.	Plaintiffs do not even scruple to refer to the SAC for these conclusory claims. The next sentence in this jeremiad refers to Dkt. 125, ¶¶ 118-120, which say nothing at all about these alleged events

20 C. Adding and Arguing “Alternative Facts Cannot Disguise the Fact That Dr.
Abdulhadi is Not Liable Because the Allegations Do Not Establish That Either She or the Students Acted Under Color of State Law.

21 Stripped of rhetoric and irrelevant matter, Plaintiffs’ opposition reflects a simple outline 22 of their unsupported §1983 claims against Dr. Abdulhadi. Since Plaintiffs sue her in her 23 individual capacity they seek to advance supervisory liability claims but fail to plead facts 24

 26
 27 ¹ This is the third time that Plaintiffs have failed to allege facts showing that Dr. Abdulhadi was a 28 supervisor, rather than advancing non-conclusory factual allegations, and there is no reason to afford them a fourth chance.

1 strictly tying Dr. Abdulhadi's acts as a supervisor to the alleged constitutional injury inflicted on 2 plaintiffs by students. Dkt. 147 at 6, 7-15 and 24, 4-15 (See also Dkt. 125 at ¶119). She cannot be 3 liable unless, while acting under color of law, she so controlled the students that both she and 4 they became state actors. The argument fails. First, even setting aside the dire First Amendment 5 implications, the claim that she influenced students to violate Plaintiffs' rights does not make it a 6 claim that she acted under color of law. Indeed, a university professor exercises mere influence 7 over her students, rather than the control a prison watch commander exercises over prison 8 guards. Second, even if Dr. Abdulhadi were a supervisor (which Plaintiffs have not alleged), 9 supervisors are not responsible for the acts of subordinates who are not themselves state actors.

10 The threshold question is whether Dr. Abdulhadi was even acting in her individual 11 capacity under color of law. "All actions of a government official are not, simply by virtue of 12 the official's governmental employ, accomplished under the color of federal law." Johnson v.
 13 Knowles 113 F.3d 1118 (9th Cir. 1997) citing Laxalt v. McClatchy, 622 F. Supp. 737, 746 (D.
 14 Nev. 1985)². "A person acts under color of state law if he 'exercises power possessed by virtue 15 of state law and made possible only because the wrongdoer is clothed with the authority of state 16 law.' Johnson , id. citing West v. Atkins, 487 U.S. 42, 49 (1988). (Emphasis added). Even 17 where the ostensible state actor is an elected official, influence is not control. In Johnson, 18 plaintiffs sued Knowles, a California Assemblyman, alleging he had used his position to expel 19 them from a Republican party committee because they were gay. The Johnson plaintiffs argued, 20 just as the Mandel plaintiffs do here, that Knowles's official status enabled him to exercise 21 greater influence over the Committee which had expelled the plaintiffs. Johnson rejected this 22 argument, holding that "the mere fact that the prestige of Knowles's office may have enhanced 23 his influence over the Committee is not enough to convert his actions into state action" Id. at 24 1117.

26
 27 ² Laxalt, discussed infra, involved a Bivens claim that was dismissed because the acts Laxalt 28 allegedly committed were not performed under color of law. As Johnson illustrates, the "color of law" analysis remains the same for all §1983 actions.

1 In affirming the district court's dismissal of the complaint for failure to state a claim, 2 Johnson approvingly cited Laxalt v. McClatchy, holding that a United States Senator did not act 3 under color of law when he wrote a letter on Senate stationery demanding that a newspaper turn 4 its evidence for an article over to law enforcement, and that it retract the article. Johnson and 5 Laxalt hold that influence is not the same as state control for supervisory liability purposes .

6 Dr. Abdulhadi cannot be held liable unless she was exercising power (as opposed to mere 7 influence) given to her by state law and made possible only because of that authority. Under 8 Johnson, "influence" is not enough whether the allegations are cloaked as "advising and 9 mentoring", "close academic relationships" or "string pulling" (Dkt. 125 ¶¶ 70, 119, and 120).

10 This brings us directly to the problem of supervisory liability, which runs against the 11 individual acting under color of law and is based on the supervisor's personal responsibility for a 12 subordinate's constitutional violation. See 9th Cir. Model Jury Instruction 9.3. A subordinate 13 cannot effect a constitutional violation unless the subordinate is a state actor. 42 USC §1983.
 14 As Laxalt shows, even a public official making emphatic demands on U.S. Senate stationery is 15 not necessarily acting under color of state law. Laxalt, 622 F.Supp.2d at 747. Where alleged 16 private wrongdoers are not exercising a "traditional state function" they remain just that – private 17 actors. Collins v. Womancare 878 F.2d 1145, 1148 (9th Cir. 1989).

18 The students that Plaintiffs allege are Dr. Abdulhadi's supposed subordinate wrongdoers 19 are alleged to have disrupted a speech through loud chanting, and to have retracted Hillel's 20 invitation to the KYR Fair, an event sponsored by a combination of university and private 21 organizations. Dkt. 125 ¶52 & ¶113. Neither act falls within the exclusive prerogative of the 22 state. Accordingly, even if the students in question are subordinate wrongdoers they are not state 23 actors over whom Dr. Abdulhadi exercised control and thus supervisory liability cannot attach to 24 Dr Abdulhadi.

25 Supervisory officials sued under section 1983, "are not liable for the actions of 26 subordinates on any theory of vicarious liability... [and thus a] supervisor may be liable... only 27 if there exists... (1) his or her personal involvement in the constitutional deprivation, or (2) a 28 sufficient causal connection between the supervisor's wrongful conduct and the constitutional

1 violation.” Jeffers v. Gomez, 267 F.3d 895, 915 [9th Cir. 2000]. In this case, Plaintiffs do not –
 2 and truthfully cannot – allege facts that demonstrate that Dr. Abdulhadi directly engaged in acts 3 that disrupted the Barkat event or retracted Hillel’s invitation to the KYRF, or that she controlled 4 the decision to do either of these things. The SAC is rife with conclusions such as “mandated” 5 or “controlled” without ever describing what Dr. Abdulhadi actually said or did. This is simply 6 not enough for a supervisory liability claim.

7 Indeed, plaintiffs ask this Court to conflate influence with power, a mistake abjured by 8 Johnson and Laxalt. Such an error would radically expand §1983’s understanding of state actors 9 and supervisory liability and invite an unending cascade of litigation every time a professor 10 spoke up and someone drew a faint line from that speech to some student’s action. The absence 11 of factual allegations situating Dr. Abdulhadi as anything more than a private actor who is also a 12 state employee, and the absence of factual allegations turning the students she advises into order-13 following employees cannot support so drastic a transformation.

14 D. Plaintiffs Attempt to Avoid This Court’s Ruling That They Must Show 15 Specific Intent to Discriminate by Referring to Prison Cases That the Court 16 Has Ruled Inapposite – and by Then Misquoting the Holdings of Those 17 Cases.

18 This Court made a clear ruling that Plaintiffs must plead facts showing a deliberate intent 19 to discriminate, and that Eighth Amendment prison condition cases cannot be used in this setting 20 as a basis for supervisory liability. Dkt. 124 at 36, 12-22. In just a few breathtaking sentences 21 plaintiffs ignored the ruling and repeat the same argument, citing the very kind of Eighth 22 Amendment prison condition case this Court warned was inapposite. Plaintiffs then stated as a 23 rule of law a proposition totally absent from the prison case they cited. Dkt. 147 at 12, 4-8.)

24 Plaintiffs argue that Dr. Abdulhadi’s motion does not “cite authority that a state actor can 25 escape liability when acquiescing to conduct of non-state actors under her control, direction, or 26 supervision expected to violate the constitutional rights of others. Contra Robins v. Meecham, 27 60 F.3d 1436, 1442 (9 th Cir. 1994) (when officials have “actual knowledge of impending harm

1 easily preventable,” their failure to act suggests that they actually want the harm to occur) 2 (citation omitted).

3 Plaintiffs fail to mention that Robins is the very kind of Eighth Amendment prison 4 conditions case previously held to be inapposite. They likewise fail to mention that the quote 5 about “actual knowledge of impending harm easily preventable” is nowhere to be found in 6 Robins. There is no reason to reward Plaintiffs for misquoting irrelevant cases as a means to 7 radically expand §1983 liability.

8 E. Plaintiffs Cannot Make Up Facts About Dr. Abdulhadi’s Alleged Anti- Semitism and Argue These “Alternative Facts” in Their Opposition.

9 The outrageous slander that Dr. Abdulhadi is anti-semitic comes in two forms. Its overt 10 form, Dkt. 147 at 25, 5-9 is entirely fact-free. Plaintiffs do not even pretend to find anything in 11 their SAC to support such a charge.

12 The second slander is more subtly constructed, and as such requires more attention. The 13 opposition makes the fact-free claim that Dr. Abdulhadi’s alleged steps “preventing Hillel from 14 hosting a table at the KYR Fair) were motivated by a “specific intent to discriminate against 15 Jews.” Dkt. 147 at 3, 17-19. Since no supporting allegations are cited we are left having to 16 guess at the source for this claim.

17 In sum, Plaintiffs contend that Dr. Abdulhadi subscribes to an alleged BDS “mandate” 18 that requires it’s supporters to “disrupt, isolate, and silence all opposing viewpoints. This is the 19 “official policy” of the AMED Program and the College of Ethnic Studies. She is thus required 20 to “engage in and support efforts to disrupt speech and gatherings.” She is head of the AMED 21 Program and faculty advisor to GUPS. AMED, GUPS and COES have sponsored numerous 22 events at which “Zionist Jews” were denounced. In 2013 GUPS held a rally and distributed 23 materials lauding violent resistance to colonization.

24 The Court has already noted that “Plaintiffs, at most, attempt to build a bridge between 25 Abdulhadi’s alleged anti-Zionist and anti-Israel stances, her pro-Palestinian resistance support, 26 and her academic pursuits to support an inference that she must have encouraged GUPS or others 27 to engage in the acts of discrimination complained of. That bridge supports no weight” Dkt. 124

1 at 36, 24 – 37, 3. Plaintiffs’ new allegations remain grounded in rank speculation and are just as 2 flimsy an assumptive structure as before.

3 Plaintiffs’ claims do not match the authority they invoke, (i.e., the dreaded “anti-4 normalization” mandate which Plaintiffs have sought to demonize.³) The most important (and 5 least surprising) aspect of the actual USACBI Academic Boycott guidelines is that Plaintiffs 6 have misquoted it. Plaintiffs claim that the guidelines require “the disruption and silencing of 7 divergent viewpoints relating to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict”. Dkt. 147 at 12, 22-26. This 8 appears nowhere in the guidelines. Plaintiffs also claim that consistent with what they call the 9 “mandate”, Dr. Abdulhadi is compelled to “work towards the cancellation or annulment of 10 events, activities, agreements, or projects . . . [that] promote the normalization of Israel in the 11 global academy . . . ”. Dkt. 147 at 12, 66 - 13, 1. The first ellipse conceals a crucial omitted 12 phrase. The actual language calls for supporters to “work towards the cancellation or annulment 13 of events, activities, agreements, or projects involving Israeli academic institutions or that 14 otherwise promote the normalization of Israel in the global academy, whitewash Israel’s 15 violations of international law and Palestinian rights, or violate the BDS guidelines.”

16 (Emphasis added to highlight omitted material.)

17 The boycott does not involve Israelis per se, or even Israelis with conflicting views.
 18 Rather, it targets government affiliation. The guidelines explain “The BDS movement, including 19 PACBI, rejects on principle boycotts of individuals based on their identity (such as citizenship, 20 race, gender, or religion) or opinion” and goes on to state that “[m]ere affiliation of Israeli 21 scholars to an Israeli academic institution is therefore not grounds for applying the boycott.
 22 (emph. in orig.)

24 ³ The summary and quotations are taken directly from <http://usacbi.org/guidelines-for-applying-the-international-academic-boycott-of-israel/>, last visited June 20, 2018. This page contains, without deletions, the language misleadingly quoted in Plaintiffs’ opposition. Since Plaintiffs treat the USACBI web site as authoritative (Dkt. 147 at iii, 24) it should be considered without any further controversy. However, out of an abundance of caution, Dr. Abdulhadi is simultaneously filing a Further Request for Judicial Notice Dkt.154.

25

27

28

1 The Guidelines remind activists that: “An Israeli academic is entitled, as a taxpayer to 2 receive funding from his/her government or institution ... so long as this is not condition upon 3 serving Israel’s policy interests in any way ... mere affiliation of the academic to an Israeli 4 institution does not subject the conference or activity to boycott.” They go on to state that 5 “Debates between Palestinians/Arabs and Israelis are also excluded from the boycott if organized 6 without any cooperation with Israel, its lobby groups, or its complicit institutions.”

7 Thus, far from targeting Jews, or Israeli Jews, or even pro-Zionist Israeli Jews, the 8 boycott and its anti-normalization campaign aims at government run or controlled institutions 9 and people and programs tied to them. And nothing calls for “disruption and silencing of 10 divergent viewpoints.”

11 Plaintiffs swerve from misquoting USACBI’s anti-normalization policy Dkt. 125 at ¶38, 12 to making the baldly unsupported claim that this policy requires disruption of any gatherings “in 13 support of Jewish sovereignty” and bars public expression. Dkt. 125 at ¶39. It is only a quick 14 step from this manifestly fictitious “policy” to the equally false claim that “consistent” with this 15 policy, a College within the university, an academic program within the university, and a student 16 group have rallied against “Zionist Jews.” Dkt. 125 at ¶40. Of course, the “evidence” for this 17 says nothing at all about disrupting the speech of “Zionist Jews” but instead talks of militant 18 resistance to colonizers voiced via stencils allegedly distributed by GUPS (Dkt. 125 at ¶41) and 19 chalk not attributed to anyone. (Dkt. 125 at ¶42.)

20 The leaps of logic and cavalier treatment of actual facts in the SAC are dizzying. To 21 begin with, the assertion that “anti-normalization” requires the disruption of gatherings in 22 support of Jewish sovereignty is supported by nothing at all and has now been exposed as 23 contrary to BDS’ actual position by the very authority Plaintiffs rely on for this contention.
 24 Second, the false charge of numerous events attacking “Zionist Jews” melts away in the two 25 following paragraphs that are supposed to stand for proof.⁴ Third, just as with Plaintiffs’ two 26

27 ⁴ We can be confident that had anyone at either rally criticized Jews as a race or religion or 28 ethnic group, Plaintiffs would have shouted it to the heavens.

1 prior failed attempts to state a claim, nothing in the SAC links Dr. Abdulhadi to these fantasized 2 attacks, and Plaintiffs do not even try to claim that either rally was sponsored by COES or 3 AMED, despite the supposedly “official” policies.

4 F. Plaintiffs Need to Falsely Smear Dr. Abdulhadi as an Anti-Semite Because 5 Their Case Collapses Without It.

6 It is important to remember that Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims are invidious 7 discrimination claims – i.e., the unequal treatment of a class of individuals – and are thus viable 8 claims only if they are based on facts that demonstrate Dr. Abdulhadi acted with the specific 9 intent to discriminate against Plaintiffs because of a protected characteristic. OSU v. Ray, 699 10 F.3d 1053, 1074 (9th Cir. 2012). See Dkt. 124 at 17,4; 20, 22; 25, 20; and 36, 1.) There are no 11 facts that show Dr. Abdulhadi singled Plaintiffs out, knew the plaintiffs, or otherwise had any 12 knowledge that Plaintiffs were individuals with a protected characteristic. Notwithstanding 13 Plaintiffs’ protestations to the contrary, alleged invidious discrimination means that mere 14 knowledge of a constitutional violation is not an absolute basis for liability. The charge must 15 satisfy the “mental state element and not merely a threshold supervisory test that is divorced 16 from the underlying claim.” OSU v. Ray, 699 F.3d at 1073 at fn.15. For this added reason, 17 Plaintiffs’ claims against Dr. Abdulhadi fails.

18 G. Dismissal Is Required Because Plaintiffs Have Failed To Plead Non-19 Conclusory Factual Allegations That Would Make Dr. Abdulhadi’s 20 Culpability Plausible.

21 In Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly 550 U.S. 544 (2007) major telecommunications providers 22 were sued for illegal restraint of trade because they engaged in parallel conduct unfavorable to 23 competition. The Supreme Court held that absent a factual context suggesting they had illegally 24 agreed to restrain trade by engaging in this conduct, as opposed to merely following market 25 incentives to engage in identical, independent action, the complaint should be dismissed for 26 failure to state a claim. Id. at 548-549. Twombly thus addressed a problem similar to the one 27

28

1 posed to this Court – can parallel actions by independent parties with common interests support a 2 claim that the defendants conspired to restrain First Amendment rights?

3 Reviewing the economic structure of the telecommunications market, the Supreme Court 4 observed that “[T]he economic incentive to resist was powerful, but resisting competition is 5 routine market conduct.” Id. at 566. Twombly held that “parallel conduct does not suggest 6 conspiracy”, and the plaintiffs must advance allegations “plausibly suggesting (not merely 7 consistent with)” illegal conduct. Id. at 557. Without some “further factual enhancement it 8 stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility...”, without which there is no 9 entitlement to relief. Id. Concluding that pleadings must contain more than a “statement of facts 10 that merely creates a suspicion”, Id. at 555 the Supreme Court ordered the lower court to dismiss 11 the case. Twombly’s lesson is that where motives matter, if the same alleged act might have 12 either a benign explanation (a natural resistance to competition) or a malevolent one (illegal 13 conspiracy or combination), plaintiffs must advance factual allegations of illegal conduct, and 14 cannot rest their claims on suspicions and mere legal conclusions. Id. at 564.

15 Plaintiffs here fail this test twice. Since their claims against Dr. Abdulhadi are invidious 16 discrimination claims, if, as plaintiffs allege, Dr. Abdulhadi acted to cause disruption of the 17 Barkat event or to block Hillel from the KYR Fair, Plaintiffs must also show that she specifically 18 intended to discriminate against Plaintiffs based on a protected characteristic. In Twombly Bell 19 Atlantic and its codefendants had a natural, legal reason (resistance to competition) to engage in 20 certain conduct. The Twombly plaintiffs alleged factual conclusions that the defendants actually 21 engaged in this conduct for illegal, conspiratorial reasons. But their case was dismissed because 22 they could not allege facts showing that illegal conspiracy, rather than innocent resistance, likely 23 caused the parallel conduct. The Plaintiffs here have not shown and cannot show that the acts 24 they allege Dr. Abdulhadi undertook were intended to harm them because they were Jews or 25 Israelis. Plaintiffs have pleaded nothing that makes this scandalous claim more plausible than 26 the obvious explanation that Dr. Abdulhadi, like students of all races and religions, longs to see 27 justice done in Palestine and opposes the continued oppression of Palestinian people. Plaintiffs 28 have failed to make factual allegations plausibly suggesting that Dr. Abdulhadi engaged in

1 invidious discrimination. In fact, they have detailed many reasons to believe the opposite – that 2 she has acted from motives of social justice that are fully protected by the First Amendment.

3 Twombly also teaches what must be alleged to show illegal “concerted action”, which 4 may violate the Sherman Act, as opposed to “parallel action,” which does not. Plaintiffs alleged 5 that telecommunications carriers had agreed to restrain competition and acted in concert in 6 service of this conspiracy. Since innocent resistance to competition would explain the same 7 behavior, Twombly held that “a bare assertion of conspiracy will not suffice. Without more, 8 parallel conduct does not suggest conspiracy, and a conclusory allegation of agreement at some 9 unidentified point does not supply facts to show illegality.” Id. at 556, 557. Just as it was 10 natural for each Twombly defendant to resist competition, it is natural for students concerned 11 about justice in Palestine to resist efforts to whitewash what they see as an illegal occupation.
 12 That students protested the Barkat event or opposed Hillel’s presence at a KYR Fair does not 13 suggest that Dr. Abdulhadi directed them, and the “conclusory allegation” of direction does not 14 supply facts to show it. Instead of alleging actual facts showing Dr. Abdulhadi’s direction, 15 Plaintiffs make mere conclusory allegations that she pulled strings and encouraged the students,

16 “[F]or a complaint to survive a motion to dismiss, the non-conclusory ‘factual content’ 17 and reasonable inferences from content, must be plausibly suggestive of a claim entitling the 18 plaintiff to relief.” Moss v. United States Secret Service 572 F.3d 969, 969 (2009). Also see al-19 Kidd v. Ashcroft, 580 F.3d, 949, 956 (2009). A pleading that offers only "labels and 20 conclusions" or "a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action" will not suffice.
 21 Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678,

22 Plaintiffs here, instead of following Iqbal’s lessons, appear to model their SAC after 23 Iqbal’s complaint. Iqbal holds that “bare assertions” that a defendant was the “architect” of a 24 policy or was “instrumental” in executing it are nothing more than a “formulaic recitation” of the 25 elements of a claim and are not to be treated as factual allegations. Id. at 680, 681. Yet Plaintiffs 26 here insist that Dr. Abdulhadi subscribes to and enforces an anti-normalization policy without 27 factually describing what she allegedly did to enforce it in a way that harmed Plaintiffs’ 28 constitutional interests. Dkt. 125 at ¶¶ 37-40.

1 A claim has facial plausibility when the pleaded factual content allows the court to draw 2 the reasonable inference, based on the court's judicial experience and common sense, that the 3 defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. See id. at 678-79. "The plausibility standard is not 4 akin to a probability requirement, but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant 5 has acted unlawfully. Where a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a 6 defendant's liability, it stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement 7 to relief." Id. at 678 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

8 H. Plaintiffs' Allegations Made On Information And Belief Fail Because, At The 9 Least, They Are Not Plead With Sufficient Factual Support.

10 The SAC is riddled with "facts" alleged only on information and belief. Dkt. 125 at ¶¶ 11 70, 94, 104, 108, 116, 117, 118, 124, 130, 154, and 171. Plaintiffs' opposition has insisted that 12 it is appropriate for them to ground one of their most critical claims against Dr. Abdulhadi, that 13 she "mandated that [GUPS] and all its members implement anti-normalization at every 14 opportunity on campus, including, explicitly, [the Barkat] event..." on guesswork.
 15 Although there is no governing law or even guidance from the Ninth Circuit, post-Iqbal district 16 courts in this Circuit have generally coalesced around a toleration of allegations made on 17 information and belief only where there is enough factual content surrounding it to plausibly 18 suggest behavior that meets threshold pleading requirements. Talk Radio Network Enters. v.
 19 Cumulus Media, 271 F. Supp. 3d 1195, 1207 (D-OR Medford Div. 2017), accord, Klohs v.
 20 Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 901 F. Supp. 2d 1253, 1259 (D. HI 2012); Joshua David Mellberg 21 LLC v. Will, 96 F. Supp. 3d 953, 989 (D. AZ 2015).

22 This Court has enunciated a similar position, holding "[t]hat an allegation is pled on 23 information and belief is neither dispositive nor particularly germane. Per Iqbal and Twombly, 24 the proper inquiry remains whether the plaintiff has presented a non-conclusory factual 25 allegation." FlatWorld Interactives LLC v. Apple Inc., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 172453, *11-12, 26 2013 WL 6406437 (N.D. Cal 2013). Flatworld provided an example of how to conduct this 27 inquiry that illustrates why the Plaintiffs here fail. In Flatworld the Court had to determine 28 whether Apple's allegations, pleaded on information and belief, were buttressed "with sufficient

1 factual support and did not merely provide conclusory assertions.” Id. The Court found that it 2 had, because after pleading a fact on information and belief, it went on to cite facts supporting its 3 conclusion, such as discussions Flatworld had with litigation counsel, what it told potential 4 patent purchasers, as well as emails and other communications.

5 But the Plaintiffs here have none of that. Nothing supports their claim that Dr. Abdulhadi 6 required (“mandated”) GUPS members to implement anti-normalization practices at every 7 opportunity. Nothing supports their claim that she specifically required this with reference to the 8 Barkat event.⁵ Nor have Plaintiffs even attempted to meet Judge Chen’s standard of establishing 9 “at least a prima facie showing of a plausible claim and practical barriers to obtaining supporting 10 evidence absent discovery.” Menzel v. Scholastic, Inc., 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44833 ND. Cal.

11 I. Plaintiffs Lack Standing To Complain On Hillel’s Behalf

12 Only one of the plaintiffs (Mandel) was even alleged to be a member of Hillel Dkt. 125 at 13 ¶10, although they fail to explain how a student who has already graduated can still be a member 14 of a registered campus organization. Plaintiffs reason that if Hillel had not been excluded this 15 former student would have attended the KYR Fair. Dkt. 147 at 22, 13-21. None of the 16 allegations in the SAC support this wild claim. The SAC merely claims that Hillel was not 17 permitted to have a table at the Fair. It does not allege that Mandel was barred from attending. It 18 does not explain how Mandel, as a former student and former member of a campus group was 19 harmed by Hillel’s exclusion. He has not alleged that he was excluded from the Fair because of 20 his religious or ethnic identity. Mandel was free to attend the event and learn whatever he 21 wished.

 23
 24
 25⁵ Plaintiffs should heed the warning of Merritt v. Countrywide Fin. Corp., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26 142842, *4-5 (N.D. Cal.) that “plaintiffs should accordingly refrain from making “hypothetical” 27 allegations unsupported by either personal knowledge or a good faith belief in their truth. Fed. R.
 28 Civ. P. 11(b). . . [and] that Rule 11 sanctions may be available, if, at the summary judgment stage, it turns out that any of the plaintiffs’ surviving ‘hypothetical’ allegations are baseless.”

J. The Radically Expanded Nature Of Supervisory Liability Plaintiffs Seek To Impose Proves Dr. Abdulhadi Is Entitled To Qualified Immunity.

Plaintiffs argue that Dr. Abdulhadi should inherently know what conduct violates free speech and equal protection rights. Dkt. 147 at 23, 27- 24,1. This argument ignores Plaintiffs' own admission that the SAC presents strictly supervisory liability claims against her. Dkt. 147 at 6, 7-15 and at 24, 14-15. A reasonable person who is a professor or faculty advisor cannot be fairly expected to have a sufficiently clear understanding that she could be liable for a student's political advocacy or conduct towards those who hold competing political views. This, without more, requires that Dr. Abdulhadi be given qualified immunity.

3. DISMISSAL WITH PREJUDICE IS MERITED

In its prior dismissal order the Court gave Plaintiffs a handful of straightforward rules. Plaintiffs ignored some (invidious discrimination and no supervisory liability) and utterly failed to follow the others. Plaintiffs have not set forth what new facts they might plead to correct these defects because they cannot in good faith make the required allegations. The campaign to inflict “massive punishments” on a professor because of her First Amendment protected activities must end.
